The Owingsville Outlook.

VOL. XXVII. OWINGSVILLE, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, AUGUST 3, 1905. NO. 4.

Drink Wainscott's Pop. 5c

Dr. W. E. Phillips will sell three good horses here Court day.

Geo. T. Young is the authorized agent of The Outlook to collect.

Ambrose S. Ulery succeeds Chas. E. Teal as postmaster at Cropks.

Dr. G. W. Conner makes teeth from the cheapest to the best $10.

The Owingsville and Farmers baseball clubs will play here Saturday.

H. L. Lane is agent for Wiedemann bottled beer and Budweiser bottled and keg.

Light-weight school shoes, all sizes, worth $1.50, $1.75, $2 for 74c. at Goodpaster & Co.'s

All who have property to sell at public auction sell on M. D. Faris. He will give satisfaction.

The ladies of the Methodist Church served ices and cakes at the Court-house Tuesday night.

Go to Goodpaster & Co.'s and get your child a pair of school shoes for 74c; worth twice the price.

Fletcher Crouch sold to Trumbo Snedegar three yearling horse colts at $75 each and one two-year old for $100.

Dr. G. W. Conner, the dentist, uses Odontuader and all approved anesthetics for the painless extraction of teeth.

The corn crop appears fairly vigorous in growth, though the stalks are not stocky enough to support a very large ear.

Cards are out announcing the celebration of the Tin Wedding anniversary of Capt. and Mrs. J. O. Wood, of Preston, Thursday, August 3.

Miss Pickett Metcalfe called at this office Thursday and showed us her State teachers' certificate which entitles her to eight years' teaching in the State.

The Bath County Teachers' Institute will begin Monday, Aug. 21. Every teacher holding a certificate in the county is required to attend. Prof. Willis, of Lexington, will conduct it.

Presbyterian Church.—Rev. J. B. Meechem, of Mt. Sterling, preached at the Presbyterian church Sunday night. He has been employed to preach here each first Sunday night in each month, beginning next Sunday night.

Courier-Journals Later Arrive.—The Courier-Journal "Owl" train, from Louisville to Lexington was on a paying venture and has been discontinued. The Courier-Journals reach here now at 1:45 p. m. instead of at 10:45 a. m. The Cincinnati Post continues to arrive at 7:15 a. m., and the Lexington Herald at 10:45 a. m.

A Mixed Game.—A mixed baseball club from Salt Lick came to Thursday afternoon and were defeated by a mixed Owingsville club by 23 to 13. The mixture in each case consisted of "League" and junior players. The Owingsville are quite cheaty over the outcome and wouldn't mind tackling the Nebraska Indians right now.

Policy Paid.—Wyoming, Ky., July 31, 1905.—S. M. Parrell, Dear Sir: We have received from you $1,804, being amount of policy for $1,000 with accumulations held by Jesse T. Atchison in the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York.

Jessie Lee Atchison,
Charlie H. Atchison,
Bettie M. Atchison.

Fire.—Tuesday night about 9:30 o'clock the millinery store of Daniel & Freiman was discovered to be on fire. The first persons to get in the building found a pile of paper and rubbish in the rear room against partition in ashes. The fire engine was put to work and the fire was finally put out. Caution was used to keeping the doors and windows closed as much as possible to stop the draught. The smoke passed upward through the partition and escaped at the roof, causing it to appear as if there was fire just under the roof. Holes were cut in the roof and also in that of the building occupied by E. W. Heflin. The hose was carried to the roof and both buildings flooded with water. About all of the stock of Daniel & Freiman was carried out, though it is in a badly damaged condition. There was $100 in cash lost in a spool case; but burned.

The two buildings were owned by the heirs of F. M. Ewing. The damage to the buildings will probably not exceed $150.

The origin of the fire is not known, but it is said that some children were playing in the millinery store before it was closed for the night, and on a previous occasion had started a blaze that was discovered before it made headway.

Daniel & Freiman had $1,000 insurance on their stock. E. W. Heflin also had his stock insured.

The fire-fighters worked in great confusion and were almost constantly at cross purposes. It was very lucky that the fire was extinguished so quickly. If the first building had burned likely the most of the block would have been consumed.

Food Wheat Crop.—The average yield of wheat by weight for the county will be about 7½ bushels per acre. Little or none of it will grade up to No. 2. In quantity and quality it is one of the poorest crops ever harvested in this county.

Unclaimed Letters.—Remaining in Owingsville Postoffice July 31, 1905: Mr. and Mrs. Willie Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. H. Royse, Mr. and Mrs. John Cline, Mrs. Ame Glover, Roy Smoot, Rev. J. D. Randolph, Mrs. Sidney G. Clay, Mrs. G. M. Hampton, Miss Jessie Hobgood, Robt. Gooch, Mrs. Minna Han, French Crouch. Persons calling for above letters please say "advertised."

J. A. Barnes, P. M.

McNan Wilson.—Mr. Frank McNab and Miss May Wilson were united in marriage Thursday by Elder B. H. Rose at his residence. Chester Snedegar and Miss Ruthie Darnell were attendants. The bride is a daughter of Wm. Wilson, of near Odessa. The bridegroom is a son of James McNab, of near Reynoldsville. They are nice, worthy young people and are wished a continuance through life of the joys of the honeymoon.

To Get Foreigners.—Several citizens rendered desperate by the inability to secure domestic help are going to try to secure foreigners, Swiss preferably. There is some talk of trying to induce a colony of desirable foreigners to settle hereabouts for the purpose of securing reliable help for household and other work. A half dozen citizens have already concluded to try the experiment. No doubt both men and women of a reliable and industrious class of foreigners could secure positions at good wages.

Robbed Cash Register.—On Monday morning Thos. Daugherty, bartender at Tim Allen's saloon, closed up and went to breakfast. When he returned he saw on the cash register the number 65 up. He knew he had made no sale of that amount and investigated the register. He found money to the amount of sixty to sixty five dollars gone, and Wallace Powers, of course, had been the last one in the saloon that morning and Mr. Daugherty instantly suspected that he had hidden in the saloon and robbed the register when the saloon was locked up. Powers was found and he at first denied the theft. He later confessed and returned fifty two dollars of the money. Powers was tried Monday and held over to Circuit Court under $500 bond. He is a son of Alex Powers. Alex has lived here since his youth and not a word was ever alleged against his character for honesty and good citizenship.

Letter from Dowsee, Dav Co., Okla.—July 24, 1905.—We have the best prospect for crops we ever had. Corn was in roasting-ears July 15 and will make 20 to 30 bushels per acre. Cotton is blooming and boiling finely. Broom corn, kaffir corn and milo maize are heading. Watermelons are getting ripe and there is plenty of them.

Everybody is proud of the crops all over the country, and there is nothing to hinder them from being well pleased, for it has rained almost as well as one could wish, and that is all we need here, for we have the soil. There will be plenty of money this fall. Cotton and broom corn are both at a good price. To get help to gather the crops is all we fear now.

There was plenty of land laid out this year. Every one had more than could be done. There is plenty of land to sell, rent and lease. We have a prospect of getting two railroads too through the county in two years; one to start at Elk City and to go northwest through Beaver county and Texas Co., add the other one to start at Kingfisher and run west through Tologa, Dewey Co., through Day and Hemphill county, Texas, and Colorado. The fine prospects for crops and railroads have already caused people to come in here and buy and contest land, and there will be plenty of it this fall. Land has already gone up, and I would advise those that want land in Day county to get it as soon as possible, for it will soon be worth as much as land in Eastern Oklahoma.

I forgot to mention wheat: It is making 10 to 25 bushels per acre. If this will interest any one there wanting land in western Oklahoma I will be glad to help him in any way to better his condition. There is a general welcome to all. Send stamp for reply.

Respectfully,
J. M. Dowsey.

Postmaster James A. Barnes has a brag garden this year. He left a 2 lb. specimen cucumber from it at this office to show what it is producing in that line.

Carpenter Released.—Samuel Jackson returned from Holden, W. Va., Thursday, accompanied by Milton Carpenter, the authorities not finding any evidence on which to hold Carpenter for the death of the Russian, Gregory Spihler.

Carpenter says he and Spihler were together at the furnace of the coal company's plant about twelve o'clock in the day. Carpenter went away for some purpose and returned in a short time, finding the body of Spihler in the furnace headforemost, the feet three or four feet from the door. Carpenter called another workman and they pulled the body out. It was badly burned and life was extinct. As they pulled the body from the furnace about forty dollars in money fell from the body, and a later search resulted in the finding of a pocket-book with some $400 in the furnace. The money being somewhat scorched.

The Coroner's jury found no evidence against Carpenter, but the Prosecuting Attorney had Carpenter watched. When Carpenter some days later announced his intention of leaving the Attorney was notified and Carpenter was arrested. He was finally released.

Richest, but not Greatest.—Miss Ida M. M. Tarbell concludes in the August McClure's Magazine her character study of John D. Rockefeller. After quoting what Mark Hanna said of John D Rockefeller: "Money mad; mad; sane in every other respect, but money mad," she goes on to describe him thus:

"The impression he makes on one who sees him for the first time is overwhelming. Brought face to face with Mr. Rockefeller unexpectedly, and not knowing him, the writer's immediate thought was, 'This is the oldest man in the world —a living mummy.' But there is no sense of feebleness with the sense of age; indeed, there is one of terrible power. The disease which in the last three or four years has swept Mr. Rockefeller's head bare of hair, stripped away even eyebrows and lashes, has revealed all the strength of his great head. Mr. Rockefeller is a big man, not overtall, but large, with powerful shoulders, and a neck like that of a bull.

The head is wide, deep and disproportionately high, with curious bumps made more conspicuous by the tightly drawn, dry, naked skin. The interest of the big face lies in the eyes and mouth. Eyes more useful for a man of Mr. Rockefeller's practices could hardly be conceived. They are small and intent and steady, and they are as expressionless as a wall. They see everything and reveal nothing. It is not a shifty eye—not a cruel or leering one. It is something vastly more to be feared—a blank eye—looking through and through things and telling nothing of what they found on the way.

"But if the eyes say nothing, the mouth tells much. Its former mask, the full mustache Mr. Rockefeller had always worn, is now completely gone. Indeed, the great feature Mr. Rockefeller sustained when his hair went was that it revealed his mouth. It is only a slit—the lips are quite lost, as if by a certain gritting together of the teeth—teeth set on something he would have. It is at once the cruelest feature of his face, this mouth, the meanest, and most pathetic, for the hard, close set line slants downward at the corners, giving a look of age and sadness. The downward droop is emphasized by deep, vertical furrows running from each side of his nose. Mr. Rockefeller may have made himself the richest man in the world, but he has paid. Nothing but paying ever pinws such lines in a man's face, ever sets his lips to such a melancholy angle.

"The big cheeks are puffy, bulging unpleasantly under the eyes, and the skin which covers them has a curiously unpleasant pallor. It is this puffiness, this unclean flesh which repels, as the thin slit of the mouth terrifies. To the whole face a certain gritting lesion is left by the nose, which is small and fine, rising like a thorn from between the heavy cheeks—a nose whose nostrils might threaten were not the eyes so much the master of his features.

"Altogether it is a strange and powerful head, and one cannot look long at it and even forget it. It is a head which has suggested many unpleasant comparisons, and all of them with their sense of truth-call of some comprehensible. One who knows what it cost to build Mr. Rockefeller's fortune understands why a man who had done business with him shuddered when he looked at Mr. Varian's sketch and said: 'An Indian with a tomahawk—an Indian with a tomahawk.'"

Miss Tarbell turns to the "other man," the other side of Rockefeller.

"There is," she says, "probably not a public character in the United States whose private life is more completely concealed than is that of John D. Rockefeller. The club never sees him. He is almost never numbered with the banqueters at great celebrations. He never appears on the platform when men of public importance gather to discuss public questions or stimulate to action in public causes. His opinions on great issues are never quoted.

"His three homes are all unpretending, even to the point of being conspicuous. Not only that, they show him to have no pleasure in noble architecture, to appreciate nothing of the beauty of fine lines and decorations.

"There is little doubt that Mr. Rockefeller's chief reason for playing golf is that he may live longer in order to make more money. He has two ambitions, a lifelong intimate of Mr. Rockefeller once said. 'To be very old and to be very rich.' He is sixty-six years old now.

"The daily life on his great estates is studiously simple. Mr. Rockefeller regulates his household as he does his business. Family and servants are trained to strictest economy. There is no more gas burned than is needed, no nonnecessary heating, no wasteful providing. There is nothing for display, nothing squandered in the sense in which an American way to prove you are rich, so rich you need not care. On every hand there is frugality and carefulness. And this frugality is certainly a welcome contrast to the wanton lavishness which on every side of us corrupts taste and destroys the sense of values.

"Beyond his intimate personal circle and his church and charity associates," she says, "Mr. Rockefeller seems to have no social life. They say in Cleveland Mr. Rockefeller always sits with his back to the wall when it is possible.

"He is not a great man," she concludes, "not a human man. He is a machine—a money machine—stripped by his overwhelming passion of greed of every quality which makes a man worthy of citizenship. He has not made good. He cannot make good. It is not in him."

Miss Tarbell apologizes for "the brutality inherent in such a study as this" by stating that "Mr. Rockefeller is not the only one of his kind. He is simply the type prominent in the public mind of the militant business man of the day. From bonkers down to street vendors we have in operation the code which he has worked out so perfectly and to which he has given the sanction of piety. And this code, so repugnant to the sense of fair play and so demoralizing to intellectual honesty, has worked its way into every activity of life, until with a growing element of the country success is the justification of any practice, until no price is too great to pay for winning."

SINCE.

The sun hath lost its brightness,
You sky its depth of blue,
The breeze its airy lightness,
The trees their verdure true.
Since thou—since thou art gone.

The rose has lost its splendor,
Fond birds have ceased to sing,
The stars faint luster render,
The year knows never Spring—
Since thou—since thou art gone.

The heart, bereft and weary,
Hath lost love's trackless gleam;
The day's dawn lengthened, dreary,
And Heaven far doth seem—
Since thou—since thou art gone.

A ROSE OF NORMANDY

By WILLIAM R. A. WILSON

At last he found a leather cord tied about the man's neck from which dangled a bright gold object. It proved to be a small seal ring with a peculiar device engraven upon its surface. Pompon carefully placed this about his own neck, then, turning to the man again, he seized him by the shoulders and dragged him to the floor and along it till he reached the hearth. He halted a moment and listened; no sound from above stairs; the stertorous breathing of his victim and the rustling of the leaves in the huge vine above the doorway outside were the only sounds audible. Once more prying up the brick, and pulling the iron ring, he pressed down one end of the stone and the empty cavity lay before him and his prey. With considerable difficulty he managed to get the man's body into the hole beneath the stone. He then scraped another mortar and his work to look down upon his enemy's form. His revengeful meditation was soon broken by the sound of shuffling footsteps descending the stair. He must hasten, complete his work, and be off. After one more push, and muttering "after 14 years," he hastily swung the stone back into place, leaving the enemy below to perish. He replaced the brick, sprinkled ashes around so as to obliterate all traces of his work, removed the table and bench from the lower door, and was gone.

They had ridden an hour or more in silence, and the early streaks of the coming day were fast spreading over the horizon. Tonti's thoughts, stimulated by the possession of so much gold, had crossed the seas and were ranging through the golden delights and dangers of life in the new world. Pompon, too, was busy tasting the sweets of revenge long delayed. At length he spoke to his companion:

"While you were gaining an entrance at the inn, I slipped away and visited a neighboring house. There I made inquiries about our innkeeper, and found that we were old acquaintances."

"How so?" asked Tonti in some surprise.

"You remember I told you how Colbert employed one of his creatures (one Feriol by name), to swear to a false accusation, so that I could be sent to the Bastille, with at least a show of justice?"

"Yes. And this fellow was—"

"Was the same person, now grown fat and rich from the reward of his infamous lie; the man to whose blasphemous oath I owe my 14 years of living death, the dungeon and the galleys. It was a merry meeting, we two old friends."

Tonti started in spite of himself at the strangeness of the man's voice, which blended at the same moment a terrible intensity of hatred with a delightful pleasure as of one who rolls some rare morsel upon his tongue before swallowing it. A shudder of what might have happened after his left Pompon alone with his long-hated enemy crossed his mind.

"What did you do to him?" he asked abruptly.

"I searched him until I found the secret ring that identifies him. That I took, for we may find it a powerful aid in case of need," was the evasive reply.

"And was that all?" queried Tonti sternly.

"Certainement! What would you? He slept; I merely put him to bed."

CHAPTER V.

DEALS WITH A FEAST, AND SHOWS HOW TONTI MEETS WITH BEAUTY AND THE BEAST AND GETS A BLOW FOR HIS PAINS.

The next noon found Tonti and Pompon back in their quarters in the Cloche de Greve. Pompon once more, with dyed face and sinister clothes, played the servant, for fear of discovery by some outsider coming in upon them suddenly.

The table was set for three, and the evidences of their recently acquired wealth was seen in the profuse expenditure for the meal before them. The nearest cook-shop had been called into requisition, and the owner thereof gasped with surprise at the number and quality of the dishes ordered to be served in a garret bedroom.

A pot of steaming bullion set at one end of the table, while down the middle of the board were placed a dish of muskrat cooked in fennel, a whole pheasant, three great slices of ham, a pasta of mutton seasoned with garlic, a capon, a bowl of salad, a small dish of the new vegetable peas, two large dishes of pastry, and, to top it off, the greatest delicacy of all, a plate of oranges. For lack of room on the table, six large bottles occupied the floor near by, representing the liquid portion of the feast.

Pompon was putting on the finishing touches, whilst Tonti walked up and down impatiently, as though waiting for some one.

"Corbleu! something must have happened to delay him. The soup will grow cold if he does not hurry," he finally exclaimed, going to the window and looking out.

"A delay is better than a disaster," remarked Pompon reintroducing.

"But you are not as hungry as I, mon ami. Pardieu! but the sight and smell of you meat makes my eyes to weep and my mouth to water."

"Hunger is a sharp, fierce dog. Better to cram an angry man than a fasting man," was the reply. "Remember, though, it is 14 years since I have eaten a full meal."

"A long time to wait, surely," cried La Salle, as he entered the room. "I'll warrant you my few minutes' delay has seemed almost that long to be for future lieutenant. Is it not so, mon cher Tonti?"

"Welcome, mon capitaine, to the feast. I feared you would miss the best part of it all, and that is the delicious, appetizing fresh from the oven dishes. But, peste! here I am talking, when we might be eating. Be seated and help."

So saying, Tonti set the others an example by sitting down himself. Soon the clatter of dishes, the sounds of hearty mastication took the place of speech. The bottles were opened and the gin-gin of the wine from the Rhone poured was added to the sounds of the feast. There was no dainty picking of food, or dawdling away of time. Every moment was made to count; and finally, when the oranges had disappeared and the last dish was emptied, Tonti leaned back with a sigh.

"I fear a late-comer will find naught but bones," he exclaimed, as he glanced at the table; then added, as he opened another bottle: "Good drink drives out bad thoughts."

The first draught a man drinks ought to be for thirst, the second for nourishment, the third for pleasure," said La Salle, as he poured out his third goblet.

"A good meal is worth hanging for," was Pompon's verdict.

From all of which it may safely be assumed that they were well content.

"Success crowns our efforts so far," said La Salle, thoughtfully. "Word came to me at my lodgings in the Rue de la Tonnellerie early this morning, that his gracious majesty would summon me an audience in the royal bed-chamber immediately after his levee. I made and received my commission, and here it is;" and, as he spoke, he pulled a document from his pocket. "Here, you see the beginning: 'Louis, by the grace of God king of France and Navarre, to our dear and well-beloved Robert Cavelier, Sieur de la Salle, greeting.' It grants all I asked for and more too. Listen: 'And we direct the Sieur Comte de Frontenac, our governor and lieutenant general, and also Duchesneau, intendant of justice, police, and finance, and the officers of the supreme council of the aforesaid country, to see to the execution of these presents; for such is our pleasure. Given at Paris this eighteenth day of June, 1678, and of our reign the thirty-fifth year. Signed, Louis.'"

"What more could you desire?" cried Tonti, striking the table with his iron hand and making the dishes rattle.

"Money," was the laconic reply.

"Pardieu! Pompon, we had forgotten," said Tonti, in some confusion. "Where is the 20,000 francs the promised our leader only yesterday?"

Pompon, who had carefully separated that amount from their store, handed La Salle a bag, which he took. La Salle looked somewhat surprised, but thanked them.

"The king has promised me a goodly sum," he continued. "The notary Simonet has loaned 4,000 livres; the advocate Raoul, 24,000; Dumont, 6,000; my cousin Francois Piet in the Rue St. Martin, 11,000; my brothers and other relatives have stripped themselves for me. Now your 20,000 added to some 14,000 Comte de Frontenac has promised me on my return to Quebec will make up the amount. So you see now why I said that success crowns my efforts so far."

"What else is needed?" asked Pompon.

"Chiefly a commission for our friend Tonti," replied La Salle. I have spoken to Colbert about it twice, and the king once. The Prince du Conti has also spoken to the king, so I have no fear of the result. I shall take you to-morrow to a levee at the Palais, and can then meet the king, and, I hope, gain an audience with him. You must plead for yourself, if you find he hesitates."

"Certainement, my tongue is as good as my sword when it comes to defending myself," smiled Tonti.

"You must needs look to your best, too," continued La Salle. "The king likes to have even half-savage explorers appear well at court." And he glanced complacently down at his own correct costume. "Besides, who knows what feminine bright eyes a fresh feather or a new doublet might attract?"

"Flame! What bright eyes could be attracted to a poor soldier of fortune like myself!" exclaimed Tonti soberly.

"That the little sinners are after a husband with both rank and wealth. They would have naught to do with one whose rank is that of captain, and whose chateau and estates can be carried in one empty pocket."

"Courage, mon brave, courage!" cried La Salle, heartily. "There is much hope for you yet. Look at me. What more am I than you? What more than I may be can you become? Are we not both on a footing? Behold fame and honor and riches for us both. We return to France. My fol! she has waited; she is ours."

Tonti smiled. "There is this difference between us, mon Capitaine, you evidently have found the one; I can see but the many."

La Salle seemed somewhat disconcerted at the interpretation put upon his words by his friend. He hesitated a moment before replying; then looking earnestly at Tonti, exclaimed:

"Come, mon cher lieutenant, since we are to share our fates fortunes, there should be no secrets between us. I have found the one. Years ago I left my native city Rouen to enter the service of the Society of Jesus. There was an attraction for me in that organization, spread like a network throughout the world. It symbolized to me that greatest of human achievements, power. But this same administration of power caused my situation to become very galling to me. I saw the manifestation of power, but in the hands of others; I was subservient to it, not holding it within my grasp. I soon realized that to be moved, not the mover, to become the passive agent, instrument of another's will, to surrender my own individuality and become but a part, an infinitesimal part of one great whole, would inevitably become intolerable. So before my vows were taken, compelled though I would be to surrender to them my patrimony, I withdrew from the society and joined my brother in Canada."

"You have a brother there?" asked Tonti in a tone of surprise.

"Yes, the Abbe Jean Cavelier, a Sulpitian priest. Now, during all my religious training I was taught to guard myself against the seductions of the female sex; that women were but necessary evils."

Here a plate fell from the hand of Pompon, who was engaged in clearing off the table, and lay in a hundred pieces on the floor. "Cuisse!" he muttered, as he attempted to pick up the fragments, "I did not know the priests taught as much wisdom as that."

La Salle did not hear, or at least did not heed the interruption.

"My early training still clung to me, until, during ill with a fever while on a visit to Montreal, I was nursed, not by the nuns, but at the home of the former governor and by his wife. Their gentleness and tenderness I had never known save for a far-off remembrance of my mother, who died when I was a small child. Then, too, her unselfish devotion and steadfastness to her husband, who was a surly brute, but who really cared for her in his own peculiar way, was a source of daily surprise and admiration. I took away her firm friendship when I left, and also a nature changed in that particular. The ground had been cleared, the soil prepared, and it only wanted the seed to be dropped."

"And while in Paris this time—" began Tonti.

"The seed was sown," was the reply.

"Pardieu! Good news this," cried Tonti, seizing his goblet. "Devil take me if I do not envy your ability to choose. To me each face is fairer, each eye is brighter, and each waist girth grows slender in every pretty woman I meet, than the one before. He spoke truly who said that a beautiful woman was the half of life, and the purgatory of the purse, and the paradise of the eyes. But come, raise up your cups in honor of the future, shall I say, Comtesse de la Salle?—Nay, he would be but a selfish king who would reward your efforts so niggardly; he will be forced to make you a duc. So, then, to the futurn duchesse—"

La Salle raised his hand deprecatingly. "Not so fast, mon ami, not so fast. Mon Dieu! you will have me married and a grandfather next. Unfortunately, she knows nothing of my devotion, and I fear," here he lapsed into a tone of tenderness, "would care little. It is this hope of winning her that spurs me on in my labors. To come back to her and at the same time be in my desire. Then can I offer her something worthy her deserts."

Tonti, nothing daunted, replied persistently, "Her health," and mounting with one foot on his chair and his goblet raised aloft, appealed to his two friends to do likewise. Even Pompon seemed moved by his infectious exuberance, and he, too, responded, albeit with an air of superior knowledge. La Salle arose; the rims of their drinking-cups met. "Her name!" cried Tonti.

La Salle hesitated. "Not now," he said; "wait until we have left this sunny land of France behind us. Know her in the meantime as The Lily of Poitou.'"

"The Lily of Poiton!" they all exclaimed in unison, and a moment later three empty goblets stood together upon the table amid the remains of the feast.

After La Salle's departure, Tonti sat in his chair, his feet sprawling out in front of him, meditating. "Pardieu! if I do not begin to love that man," he cried, looking up, "I have seen him but twice, yet he remarks he has reached out and gripped my heart already."

Rising with these words, Tonti stretched his arms and yawned. "I must be off to get my new clothes in which to appear before his majesty. How would a new baldric to support my sword, with a design worked in silver and pearls on the front? And boots of fine leather with ornamented tops pushed down to the ankle? Add a doublet of gray or brown a la mode with lace about the throat? And a cloak of dark Venetian cloth? And three curled feathers in the hat? Instead of two? Yes, for if I only look well enough I too may be moping around and telling you of the charms and graces of some fair one unknown. Ha, ha, ha! Keep quiet until my return; you will not know the butterfly." And giving a mirthful laugh he crowded down his hat upon his head and marched off with that swagger that only a soldier can learn and practice.

His errand took him from shop to shop, seeking what suited him, until he was some distance from home. At the last place he took off his old garments and directed the shopkeeper's boy to take them back to his room, and, donning his new acquisitions, he sallied forth for a stroll before returning to the Place de la Greve.

The streets of Paris at this time were execrable, no attempt being made to keep them other than the receptacle for all the accumulated filth and refuse from the houses that lined their sides. The discomfort of the foot passengers was augmented by the puddles of water that collected between the pavingstones, many of which had been removed.

Tonti had turned into a neighboring street, which was abominably paved, and was engaged in gingerly picking his way so as to avoid both the dirt and water, when he beheld a sedan-chair hastily approaching him. The bearers were in livery, and the chair was of so fine a make as to indicate that its owner was a person of rank and wealth.

Too Busy To Work.

The luxury of physical inactivity appears to be fully appreciated in the following extract from Mr. Bradford Torrey's in "Nature's Invitation;" and as an illustration, he tells of a walk he took near Miami, Florida, and of a conversation he overheard.

"I was walking away from the city at a rather brisk pace one morning, when I passed a lonesome shanty. A white man sat upon the rude piazza, and another man and a boy stood near. 'I suppose going to work to-day?' asked the boy of the occupant of the piazza.

"'No,' was the answer, quick and pithy.

"'Why not?'

"'I ain't got time.'

"I do not expect to hear the philosophy of indolence more succinctly and pointedly stated if I live a thousand years."

Her Mind Made Up.

"Pa," said Miss Strong, "I wish you would stay in this evening. Mr. Tardey will want to speak to you."

"So he has really proposed at last?" "No," replied the daughter, with an air of determination, "but he will to-night."—Catholic Standard and Times.

WELLS OF WATER

OUR BIBLE STORY by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher

(A Vision Between Dr. Lyman of God's Inspired Word.)

Copyright, 1901, by J. B. Elder.

Scripture Authority:—"And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham, and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them."—Gen. 26:18. Read Gen. 26:17-22.

ISAAC gazed over the surrounding landscape eagerly. There was a familiar look about it which carried him back through the years to the time when the flocks and herds of his father Abraham had pastured there.

"It cannot be far now to a well of good water," he exclaimed, the anxious expression of his face giving place to one of relief.

"That is welcome news, indeed," was the quick, eager response of the man standing at his side, "for the flocks and herds are parched with thirst."

"And in the water which we brought with us will perish."

The man pointed to the empty water skins strapped on the backs of the asses browsing a short distance away, and said:

"Yes, and if the Philistines had had their way you would not even have had that to recover you on the journey." And the face of Isaac's chief steward plainly showed the anger and resentment which he felt at the treatment his master had received.

The day before Isaac had departed from the land of the Philistines, having driven out by King Abimelech. He and his people had watched with jealous eye the ever-increasing success and prosperity of the son of Abraham. The abundant harvests—for Isaac had sowed and reaped a hundredfold on the lands which he rented from the Philistines; the immense flocks and herds and numerous company of servants aroused their envy and enmity, and persecution in various forms, even to the filling of the wells his father had dug, had followed, and finally Abimelech had come and said that he could not longer dwell in the land. The chief steward was indignant, and urged that vigorous measures be taken to drive the Philistines away, but on the afternoon of the following day, when the need for water was pressing they had come to a region where years before Abraham had dwelt. The familiar landscape was a welcome sight to Isaac's eyes. He knew that in the far distant were wells which his father had dug, and with a company of his servants he hurried forward.

"Yonder is the place," cried Isaac, pointing to the white limestone curbing glistening in the sunlight in the distance.

The welcome sight of the well-curbing and the promise of water revived their drooping spirits. This would be the place to camp and rest. Here the flocks and herds could feed without molestation. And grateful memories of Father Abraham's diligence in sinking wells and seeking water wherever his flocks and herds pastured filled the heart of Isaac.

"What a goodly heritage he hath left us in these wells," he exclaimed.

"Yes," responded the chief steward, warmly. "Our father, Isaac dead, yet speaketh. The wells which he dug are a greater monument to his memory than a thousand pyramids could have been."

Isaac nodded assent to the sincere tribute, and while he hastened forward, a flock of memories crowded in upon him. He recalled the circumstances of the building of the well towards which he now were hastening. He remembered the answer which his father had given when told he was foolish for digging the well on land which was not his own. "But if I do not get the good of it," he had said, "others will reap the blessing." And now new sweetness and meaning came to the words spoken so many years before.

Almost reverently he knelt upon the well's brink and looked in.

But instead of the shining surface of the water in the cool depths, he saw almost to the well's mouth the rock and dirt which had been thrown there by some wicked hand. Instead of the cooling draught, there was the evidence of the burning hatred of some foe.

With an exclamation of bitter disappointment, Isaac sprang to his feet. How long must he continue to submit to such ruthless destruction and sore persecution?

The work of the miserable Philistines," mutter the chief steward, his black and angry looks telling more plainly than words how he would like to punish them.

"Better to die fighting for our rights than to die of thirst," fiercely exclaimed another, and it was evident from the nods of assent which greeted this sentiment that the others cherished the same angry feelings. All eyes were turned on Isaac. They saw that a fierce struggle was going on in his heart. He looked first at the well and then at the faces of his angry faces of his followers. He knew what they wanted him to do. He knew that the natural resentment of his own heart prompted him to do. Had patience ceased to be a virtue? Was it foolish longer to submit to injustice? Did he not have a right to the wells which he and his father had dug? Must he continue to be a wanderer in the land which God had promised to give to Abraham and to his seed? Was it not time that he gained and held possession of the land by force? These were the questions which rose in his mind.

But in the midst of the bitter thoughts and the sore temptation, another current of thought set in, and instead of impatiently turning from it he sought to know God's will. He recalled the story his father had so often told him of Lot's choice. Of how his father had submitted to a seeming injustice rather than quarrel for his rights, and how God had blessed him. He remembered his father's words, repeated over and over again: "The Lord hath spoken good concerning thee and thy seed. Only be patient, my son, and wait in faith on Him." And then he recalled the vision he had had while yet in Gerar, and how the Lord had spoken unto him, saying:

"Unto thee and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father; and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because that Abraham obeyed My voice, and kept My charge, My commandments, My statutes and My laws."

The fierce spirit within him smoldered and died away. In the face of God's promises, in the light of his father's example, he could wait. He would not fight his own wrongs. He would wait on God. And thus did faith again win the victory, and preserve as a heritage to him and to the blessings promised of God.

Quietly facing his followers, who were still burning for revenge, he said:

"Let us restore the well, as Abraham, our father, left it."

"My master," interposed the chief steward, "pardon, I pray thee, my boldness, but if we do that our will it be to restore the well, seeing that the Philistines will surely come and rob thee of thy reward?"

"We must leave that with God. Our duty is to restore the well to its refreshing waters," Isaac replied with that but gentle voice.

The chief steward accepted the situation with as good grace as possible, and soon had the men busy removing the dirt and rock with which the well had been filled. And while the work went on Isaac turned back to meet the main company of his people.

"Didst thou find water?" was the first anxious inquiry of Rebekah.

"We have found the well which my father dug, but it has been filled up and he could get no water. But the men are busy cleaning out the dirt and rock, and there will be an abundance of water when the work is finished."

A relieved look came into the woman's face, and she said, with a sigh:

"Now we might remain here in peace. I am weary of this wandering."

"It is as God wills."

"Nay, rather, it seems as the Philistines will," was the impatient response.

"Some of them have this day been spying out our movements."

An anxious look came into the face of Isaac, but his only reply was: "God has promised us the land, and will make a place for us somewhere, where we may live at peace."

Further conversation was interrupted by arrival at the well, and the work of pitching the tents and preparing for the night. Before dark enough of the dirt and rock had been removed to obtain a scant supply of water, and with the promise of an abundance as soon as the work was completed in the morning, the camp settled down for the night, while the flocks and herds spread out over the valley and browsed under the watchful eyes of the herders. Thus the night passed uneventfully and the next day the work on the well was completed and flocks and herds and people settled down contentedly in the spot, hoping to be left in peaceful possession.

But the morning of the third day Isaac was aroused by angry voices and the sound of violent conflict. He caught the words:

"The water is ours."

Rushing from the tent he found his herdmen engaged in fierce conflict with some Philistine herdmen who had come thither with their flocks and had taken possession of the well. The struggle was sharp but short, the Philistine being worsted in the fight and when Isaac came up he found his men preparing to drive the strangers and their flocks away.

"Nay, my sons," spoke up Isaac, "treat not thine enemies so. Draw water that their flocks may drink. None shall come to a well of Abraham and turn thirsty away."

"Well, it's our water," dogredly muttered the Philistines as they watched their thirsty flocks drink.

"We will not suffer strife over its possession," spoke up Isaac. "Take it, and the Lord reward thee according to thy deserts."

And again that day found Isaac moving down the valley, where he again digged a well and found water. And there he rested in peace and contentment, while the Philistines, jealous of his prosperity, again disputed with his herdmen for the possession of the splendid well. And so he removed from thence and digged still another well, and as the days came and went Isaac's generous Philistine friends appeared to claim the new found water supply, Isaac called his people together and after the feasting and merry-making, he said:

"We shall call the new well Rehoboth, for the Lord hath made room for us, as we declared He would, and we shall be fruitful in the land."

And that night Rebekah exclaimed, as she placed her arm about his shoulder:

"It was indeed better to come hither than to dwell in the midst of strife. God hath rewarded thee for thy patience."

"Yea, the Lord gives wells of water in abundance to them that trust Him."

Wina Importations.

Friends of temperance will be glad to read that America has not increased the importations of wines substantially during the last 15 years. In 1890 wines showed a total importation of $10,000,000, and this figure is but slightly exceeded by the total for 1904, when the value of the imports was $10,324,432. But on the other hand, it is to be regretted that the production of wine in the United States has increased meantime from 24,000,000 gallons in 1890 to 38,500,000 in 1904. Surely this country is far enough along in the scale of civilization to dispense with its wine list.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Submarine's Tiny Guardians.

Three white mice are in each submarine boat and are entered on the payroll of the fleet. These little creatures detect an escape of gasoline more quickly than human beings do, and by their agonies and efforts to escape draw attention to the fact that something is amiss. These tiny but important members of the crew of A-8 went down with that unfortunate vessel. — London Graphic.

Opium in the Philippines.

The United States opium commission, appointed some months ago to investigate the opium question in the Philippine Islands, recommends that the entire traffic in the Philippines be taken in charge by the government and operated as a public monopoly. The commission further recommends that at the end of three years the importation of the drug should be absolutely prohibited, with the exception of that required for medical purposes. The report is considered a victory for the missionaries, and it is to be hoped that the government control of the traffic really means what the report seems to imply, that traffic in opium is to be limited to its use for purely medicinal purposes, and not to create a government business in the drug.

YELLOW SCOURGE.

Twenty-Seven New Cases in New Orleans Sunday.

The Number of New Foci is Again a Source of Encouragement Showing the Spread is Becoming Slower and Slower.

New Orleans, July 31.—New cases reported up total 27. Total cases to date 203; deaths Sunday three. Deaths to date 57. New foci 4. Total foci 41.

Though it was Sunday the work of fumigation, disinfecting, oiling and screening went on just the same and will continue daily until the city has been thoroughly screened and made mosquito proof. The record for Sunday allows little change from that of Saturday except in the reduction of the number of deaths. The summer of yaw fool is also again a source of encouragement showing that the spread is becoming slower and slower.

A new complication was discovered when Supt. Curran, of the New Orleans detention camp, was notified announced that two passengers who had remained the required length of time in the detention camp and sought admission into Mississippi had been turned back. If the Mississippi health authorities now refuse admission to bearers of certificates of detention issued by the marine hospital service it will result in the government abandoning the camps and travelers will have to either stay here or go to points in the north and east and spend ten days before they can return to Mississippi.

A BOLT OF LIGHTNING.

Killed Six Persons and Seriously Injured Nine at a Bathing Beach.

New York, July 31.—During a thunderstorm of terrific intensity which passed over New York six persons were struck by lightning and killed and nine were seriously injured at the Parkway Baths, Coney Island. At the same time one man was killed and three others were prostrated at Gravesend Beach.

The intense heat of the morning attracted a great multitude to the shore resorts and late in the afternoon when the storm blew up from the west ward, the Parkway beach was thronged with bathers and spectators. The sun descended in torrents and hundreds of men, women and children sought shelter under the big bath house, which is elevated above the sand on piles. The lightning was incessant and terrific thunder claps shook the bath house to the barrier of electric fluid collected together beneath it. A few minutes before 5 o'clock a bolt of lightning struck the bath house and grounded in the very thickest of the crowd. Nearly 50 persons were prostrated.

STANDS BY JAPAN.

Mikado's Peace Terms Will Have the Sympathetic Approval of Britons.

Washington, July 31.—Japan comes to the Washington conference assured that whatever her peace terms they will have the sympathetic approval of Great Britain. Several messages from Washington to London that the cause of peace would be served by an early conference with her ally favoring moderation in her demands upon Russia have not availed to change the British government's apparently inalterable determination to stand by Japan however severe she makes her demands. Japan now has the British government seen its way clear to render assistance to Washington in the efforts which this government is making to obtain an armistice. Advices reaching here show that London is opposed to an armistice until Japan has been satisfied that Russia's plenipotentiaries are prepared to direct more than discuss means of ending the war.

THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

Sunday Morning Was Spent Quietly at Kioto, Japan.

Kioto, July 31.—Secretary of War Taft and his party spent Sunday morning quietly. Some of the members of the party attended church while others visited the temples. When the party left in the afternoon on a special train for Kobe there was another remarkable demonstration. At the station a great crowd awaited Secretary Taft and Miss Roosevelt and began cheering when their carriage arrived, the ovation continuing until the train started. They were joined by the national anthem and "Auld Lang Syne" as the train pulled away from the station.

Secretary Wilson Will Not Resign.

Washington, July 31.— Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture, characterized as "wholly without foundation" the story that he will resign from the cabinet because of the expoanres of the cotton leak.

Ta Visit College Friends.

New York, July 31.—Baron Komura, Japanese peace plenipotentiary, and Baron Kaneko, the Japanese financial agent, both of whom are Harvard graduates, went to Peekskill, where they visited some friends of their college days.

The Offar Rejected.

Basle, Switzerland, July 31.—By an overwhelming majority the Zionist congress decided not to accept the offer of Great Britain of a tract of land in East Africa for the formation of a Zionist colony.

Discontent Among Reservists.

St. Petersburg, July 31.—The Novoe Vremya publishes a report from Kherbu that there is great discontent among the reservists in Manchuria at the distress inflicted on their families because of the negligence of the authorities.

Maj. Gen. George M. Randall.

St. Louis, July 31.—Maj. Gen. Geo. M. Randall died yesterday from an attack of cerebral hemorrhage. He succeeds Brig. Gen. Geo. Wint.

He Reduced the Record.

Cape May, N. J., July 31.—Being officially timed by Sam Butler, secretary of the Automobile Club of America, Walter Christie, in his 120-horse power automobile, reduced the American kilometer record by making the time in 35 seconds flat.

Stops Baseball Games.

Vicksburg, Miss., July 31.—Because of quarantine restrictions the Cotton States League of baseball clubs has practically suspended. The Vicksburg, Miss., association has disbanded the team and others will follow.

DEFINITIONS AND DERIVATION

The petrification agate was names for the river Achates, in Sicily, where it was first found.

A brochure is a small book, stitched, not bound, so named from the French "brocher," to stitch.

"By-law" owes the first part of itself to the word "bye," the old Danish word for town, burg or burgh.

The word "amateur," originally French, from the Latin "amator," a lover, means a lover of any particular art, but not a professional follower of it.

The American word "boss," for master, is the modern form of the Dutch "baas," of the same meaning. It descended from the original Dutch settlers of New York.

The word "billion" in England and the colonies means a million millions, in France and an the continent, as well as in the United States, it means a thousand millions.

The name "calomel" means "beautiful black," and was originally given to black sulphuret of mercury. As calomel is a white powder, the name is merely a jocular misnomer now.

The word "Boer," applied to the Dutch inhabitants of the country districts of the Cape of Good Hope, is the German for farmer and agriculturist. The English word "boor" had the same origin.

The word "beverage" has had many changes in orthography. It is found spelled "bevedge," "bevrage" and "beveridge." It comes from the Italian "bevere," to drink, but more remotely from the Latin.

NO MORE HEADACHE

GENERAL WEAKNESS AND FEVER DISAPPEAR TOO.

How a Woman Was Freed from Troubles That Had Made Life Wretched for Many Years.

The immediate causes of headaches vary, but most of them come from acute or poisoned blood. In anemia the blood is scanty or thin; the nerves are imperfectly nourished and pain is the way by which they express their weakness. In colds the blood absorbs poison from the mucous surfaces, and the poison irritates the nerves and produces pain. In rheumatism, malaria and the grip, the poison in the blood produces like discomfort. In indigestion the gases from the impure matter kept in the system affect the blood in the same way.

The ordinary headache-cures at best give only temporary relief. They deaden the pain but do not drive the poison out of the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on the contrary thoroughly renew the blood and the pain disappears permanently. Women in particular have found these pills an unfailing relief in headaches caused by anemia.

Miss Stella Blocker recently said: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did me a great deal of good. I had headache nearly all the time. After I had taken three boxes of these pills I became entirely well."

"How long had you suffered?" she was asked.

"For several years. I can't tell the exact date when my illness began for it came on by slow degrees. I had been going down hill for many years."

"Did you have any other ailments?"

"I was very weak and sometimes I had fever. My liver and kidneys were affected as well as my head."

"How did you come to take the remedy that cured you?"

"I saw in a southern newspaper a statement of some person who was cured of a like trouble by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My physician hadn't done me any good, so I bought a box of these pills. After I had taken one box I felt so much better that I kept on until I became entirely well."

RELATED OF ROYALTY.

King Leopold will leave a fortune of $10,000,000, most of which will go to the Belgian people for works of public utility. He regards his daughters as Lecamas to regard Regan and Goneril. The daughters will get about $40,000 each.

Early in his reign Czar Nicholas caught a bad head cold and asked a humble subject how this annoying ailment could be cured. The advice given was that the imperial nose should be anointed at night with tallow from a common candle. Years rolled on and on the day a mere accident the czar had the chance of looking through a book of household expenditures and was amazed to find he had been charged for a pound of tallow candles every night since.

Now that the German crown prince has been married, court gossips in Europe are considering who is likely to be the bride of Prince Eitel Fritz, the kaiser's second son. The general view is that it will be Princess Eva of Battenberg, with whom he was much associated during a recent visit to England. Princess Eva is quite a pretty girl, just past 17 years old, who was brought up in the simplest manner possible. It is expected that she will inherit largely from her godmother, ex-Empress Eugenie.

The duke of Connaught—Prince Arthur of Great Britain—who has just entered upon his fifty-sixth year, was the godson of the duke of Wellington and was taught to have great reverence for the old gentleman. One of the little boy's first efforts at drawing, it is said, was a picture representing the duke and Napoleon engaging in a pistol duel at point blank range. "My dear grandpapa prince," said the duke, when shown this youthful production, "remember that, though I fought Bonaparte, I could never see him without the help of a telescope."

During King Alfonso's visit to London several stories were told of how he at times shocks the Spanish nobles with his escapades. All these anecdotes, apocryphal or otherwise, helped his popularity with the British public, which was pleased to did that his 15-year-old majesty is a real boy and not altogether a royal mikado. He rides reckless motor cars and other officers, rings up the guard unexpectedly from mere motives of mischief, and generally plays the same pranks as other lads of his age. Among his own subjects of the rank and file these pranks do him good, for even the humblest likes to think that his sovereign can do something human and unceremonious.

PERSONAL PARTICULARS.

The family of the late Gen. Gomez has presented the jeweled sword he received from an American to the National museum of Havana.

The late Mary A. Livermore was also called "the Daniel Webster of American women" because of her majestic mien, solidity of character, Dorie simplicity of thought and weight of utterance.

Miss Bessie Bain, who lives on a farm near Dunham, N. Y., has been appointed an overseer of highways in her district. Miss Bain declares she will see that the work is well done. She intends to have the best section of road in the township.

Miss Helen Buck, president of the graduating class at Mount Holyoke college, probably is the greatest woman athlete in the world, but in attaining that distinction has sacrificed none of her studies. A famous university trainer says that with scientific instruction Miss Buck would be a worthy rival of some of the best male athletes.

Harold A. Loring, of Portland, Me., has received an appointment from the secretary of the interior as supervisor of natives Indian music. Mr. Loring has passed some time among the Sioux Indians of the Rosebud Indian reservation in South Dakota, becoming much interested in the Indians and their music. His new duties will take him among the various reservations of the Indians in the west.

Mrs. Frederick Farris Thompson, of New York, is an unknown woman—in a public sense, that is to say—who is doing handsome things with her money to cut out the inhumanness of conditions. She has erected a physical culture building for the Teachers' college, in New York, costing $180,000, a new building which she gave Vassar took $500,000, and a college chapel building for Williams college costing $400,000, will be dedicated in a few days.

Music as Medicine.

Place the tips of the first second and third fingers of your right hand on the artery that runs along the main bone of your left arm (where the doctor usually feels your pulse), and sing a tune, the time of which is the same as the rhythm of your pulse (the last time I tried this on myself, the first four or five pulsations I felt instantly suggested "March On, Christian Soldier"); then change abruptly to slow time, say "Nearer, Still Nearer, Country 'Tis of Thee," rendered as plaints religious; and, lastly, hoist into the the liveliest "Yankee Doodle" you can muster, and if you carefully observe your pulse at the end of each performance, you will notice that the action of your heart has been affected in every case by the tempo of the music you have sung.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

EVER TREAT YOU SO?

Coffee Acts the Jonah and Will Come Up.

A clergyman who pursues his noble calling in a country parish in Iowa, tells of his coffee experience:

"My wife and I used coffee regularly for breakfast, frequently for dinner, and occasionally for supper—always the very best quality—package coffee never could find a place on our table.

"In the spring of 1896 my wife was taken with violent vomiting which we had great difficulty in stopping.

"It seemed to cause from coffee drinking, but we could not decide.

"In the following July, however, she was attacked a number of times by the vomiting. I was away from home filling an appointment at the time, and on my return I found her very ill. She had also literally vomited herself almost to death, and it took some days to quiet the trouble and restore her stomach.

"I had also experienced the same trouble, but not so violently, and had relieved it, each time, by a resort to medicine.

"But my wife's second attack satisfied me that the use of coffee was at the bottom of our troubles, and so we stopped it forthwith and took on Postum Food Coffee. The old symptoms of disease disappeared, and during the 9 years that we have been using Postum instead of coffee we have never had a recurrence of the vomiting. We never weary of Postum, to which we know we owe our good health. This is a simple statement of facts." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

STATE ITEMS OF INTEREST

THE STATE GUARDS.

All Arrangements For Their Encampment Completed.

Frankfort, Ky., July 27.—All arrangements have been completed in the department of the adjutant general for the annual camp of instruction of the state guard, to be held at Pattcah, beginning on August 7. The Second regiment will go into camp first; it will be followed by the Fifth and Louisville regiment, and then by the Third regiment. The camp will close on September 12. The camp of the second son. The general view is that it will be Princess Eva of Battenberg, with whom he was much associated during a recent visit to England. Princess Eva is quite a pretty girl, just past 17 years old, who was brought up in the simplest manner possible. It is expected that she will inherit largely from her godmother, ex-Empress Eugenie.

WOLFE COUNTY'S RECORD.

Seven Murders Were Committed in Six Weeks.

Lee City, Ky., July 28.—Geo. Banks shot and instantly killed Newton Taubee, his brother-in-law, at Banks' creek. Some months ago Taubee was held up on the county road in daylight and robbed of over $600 by George Banks and his sister, Queen Banks. Taubee at the last May term of the Wolfe circuit court obtained an indictment against Banks and when he got out on bail did what he could to escape the penalty of the law. Banks is 27 years of age, unmarried. This makes the seventh man killed in Wolfe county in the past six weeks.

ARRESTED AND FINED.

He Kissed His Girl Too Much To Suit the Neighbors.

Louisville, Ky., July 29.—Michael Callahan, who lives at 625 Seventh street, has a sweetheart, and he loves her dearly. He was congratulated by his neighbors, for when he left them how affectionate he could be by kissing and embracing the girl in the back yard in the sight of all they could see through the fence of disorderly conduct. In the police court a number of the neighbors testified against Callahan. They said that his public exhibition of kissing and hugging the girl was shocking to their finer senses. Some one said that all the world loves a lover, but a lover of Callahan's caliber did not appeal to Judge McCann and he assessed a fine of $10.

TO PREVENT YELLOW FEVER.

The Kentucky State Board of Health Decides Not To Quarantine.

Louisville, Ky., July 29.—The Kentucky state board of health has decided not to establish a quarantine against southern cities in the yellow fever sons until the situation becomes more serious. The board communicated with the officials of the Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville and Queen & Crescent railways, and it was decided that the state regulations regarding the cleansing of passenger cars with formaldehyde is a sufficient precaution.

FATHER-IN-LAW'S DISCIPLINE.

Filled His Son-in-Law's Head and Back With Shot.

Vancebarg, Ky., July 29.—Jane Hinter, a young man, was shot in the back by his father-in-law, John Gattis, here. Hunter's back and head were filled with shot. About 100 have been taken out. His condition is not critical, however. The wounds, though painful, will probably entirely recover. The trouble grew out of Hunter's wife attending a hop against his wishes.

The McElroy Farm Sold.

Springfield, Ky., July 28.—Robert McElroy has sold his farm to his brother, Yarrett McElroy, for $25,000. The farm consists of between four and five hundred acres, and is one of the finest farms in the county.

Prominent Attorney Expires.

Williamstown, Ky., July 28.—C. H. Harrison, a prominent attorney of the Grant county bar, died at his home in this city. He was a charter member of Williamstown lodge, Knights of Pythias, and was buried by that order.

BRAIN EXPOSED.

One of the Most Sensational Surgical Operations on Record.

Louisville, Ky., July 27.—Peter Zanolari, the Italian whose skull was crushed in an elevator accident at the new Seelbach hotel July 20, has furnished the medical world with one of the most sensational surgical cases on record. Parts of the temporal, parietal and sphenoid bones were so fractured that the removal of the broken pieces left an opening six inches in diameter, through which his brain was exposed. He was taken to the University hospital, where he was on the operating table two hours. He refused to take an anaesthetic and retained consciousness during the whole period. One of the most extraordinary features of the case, from a medical standpoint, is that his temperature has never risen above 100, and he has suffered no pain. While the operation was in progress he said he was not suffering, but asked for a drink of water. The broken portions of the skull have been stitched together, and replaced beneath the scalp under the skilful direction of Dr. Simrall Anderson Zanolari continues to improve and his recovery is now assured.

RELIGIOUS FAITH.

It Did Not Prevent a Minister and a Jewess From Marrying.

Louisville, Ky., July 28.—The marriage of Rev. John E. Ali, a Baptist minister, and Miss May Lilienthal, a member of a prominent Jewish family of Louisville, has just come to light, although it was solemnized more than a week ago. The couple were married on the evening of July 19 by Rev. Arch C. Cree at the latter's residence, at 236 and Jefferson streets. They remained in Louisville for a week visiting relatives, and left for Asheville, N. C., where they will spend their honeymoon.

Later they will visit Mr. Ali's parents at Allensville, S. C. Mr. Ali, who is a native of South Carolina, has been attending the Baptist seminary here for two years, and met his bride while he was a student. They became fast friends and soon began a sweetheart. At first the families of both Mr. Ali and Miss Lilienthal demurred because of the differences in religion, but this obstacle was overcome.

REVENUE AGENT'S SUITS.

Inspector Hines Appointed To Look After Them.

Frankfort, Ky., July 28.—State Auditor Hager designated Inspector Hines to look after, for the commonwealth, all suits in county courts, which were instituted by A. M. Harrison, of Lexington, the deposed revenue agent, seeking to recover taxes on omitted property assessments. Such suits are pending in a dozen counties of the state, and Hines, through local counsel in each instance, will prosecute them to judgment.

Uncle of Curtis Jett Dead.

Bristol, Tenn., July 28.—Stephenson Jett, proprietor of the Hotel Kentucky at Elizabethtown, Tenn., after having left an early call in order to prepare for a picnic excursion, was found dead in bed. Heart failure is supposed to have been the cause of his death. Mr. Jett came to Tennessee from Breathitt county, Ky. He was an uncle of Curtis Jett, who received a life sentence in connection with the Breathitt county feuds.

Col. Hindman's Narrow Escape.

Louisville, Ky., July 27.—Col. Biscoe Hindman, of the First Kentucky regiment, narrowly escaped death in a collision between his automobile and a street car. By miscalculating his speed he crossed in front of a Broadway car and his machine was struck just as the front wheels cleared the track and was completely wrecked.

Will Bore For Oil.

Bowling Green, Ky., July 28.—Representatives of the Greensburg Oil Co., of Greensburg, Pa., are here leasing land near the city. They expect to begin boring for oil at once, and have selected a region in which natural gas was struck some years ago.

Left Brain in His Hat.

Mayfield, Ky., July 27.—Jordan Bertrum was killed here in a horrible manner. While loading a sawlog a prop slipped and threw him under the log and his head was mashed off, leaving his brains in his hat.

RICH IN HISTORIC LEGEND.

Town of New Mexico That Was Founded by Spaniards in Seventeenth Century.

The recent destruction of Tome, N. M., by flood waters from the Rio Grande river removes one of the quaintest and most historic places in the southwest, says the Kansas City Times. At the time of its obliteration a few days ago Tome had a population of about 600. Every house in the town was swept away, and what was formerly the main street is now the new channel of the erratic river. No lives were lost, but there were many narrow escapes and thrilling rescues. The survivors are now camping on the adjacent hills.

Tome is rich in historic legend, tragedy and romance. The place was founded in the seventeenth century by a colony of Spaniards coming by way of Mexico. This colony consisted of 70 persons, headed by Don Ignacio Bacca, a Spanish grandee. The settlement prospered for many years and was the leading town of New Mexico, although it never attained a population beyond a few thousand. In the palmy days Tome was the home of the Baccas, the Castillos, the Oteros, the Chaves and other distinguished families, whose names still stand on New Mexico's roster of aristocracy.

Tome was once the scene of an appalling Indian massacre, a massacre which came as a revenge because Cuervono Verde, a Comanche Indian chief, had been killed by the Spaniards. Don Ignacio Meatris Baca, daughter of Don Ignacio Bacca, the Spanish grandee. The chief had made the acquaintance of the Baccas family and lost his heart to Beatris when she was a mere child. He asked her father's permission to make her his wife. Presuming that the Indian was jesting, Don Bacca replied in the affirmative, adding that the chief might have Beatris on her fifteenth birthday.

The redskin remembered, and when Beatris was 15 he appeared at her father's home, accompanied by a band of warriors, with the plan to make war, but to help celebrate the attack. Don Bacca, realizing that the Indian was in earnest, resorted to strategy.

"Come to-morrow," he said, "for I have had news for you—Beatris is dead."

Meanwhile, the father caused a grave to be dug and next day the Indian was led thither. He looked at the little mound, accepted the story as true, and went away mourning.

A few weeks later the chief discovered that he had been deceived. He was furious. Gathering his warriors about him, he descended on Tome early on a Sunday morning when many of the residents were in church. First he captured Beatris, the object of his savage affection. Then he gave orders to destroy the town. The church was burned and many of the fleeing townsfolk were caught and scalped. Beatris became the unwilling bride of the chief, and although she grieved for a long time, she finally became reconciled to her new environment and lived to an advanced age. Don Ignacio was killed in the Tome massacre that the local priests had to call upon the clergy of Albuquerque, a short distance away, to come and help bury the dead. The romantic story of Tome is fully verified by church records saved from the recent flood by Father Ealtere, the local parish priest, who has been on duty in Tome since 1858.

NATURAL CALIFORNIA DIKE.

Strange Volcanic Formation Along the Course of the Fall River.

Nature is full of strange freaks, and her agents—rains, storms, winds and even dust—produce results that might often be mistaken for the works of human hands, though frequently on a colossal scale.

Volcanic activities are mighty factors, and though their more wonderphenomena are wrought. One of those may be seen along the course of Pall river, in northern California, says the American inventor. This stream is of considerable size, and the work of nature's gigantic forces may be seen between the upper and lower cascades of the river.

It is what might properly be called a "volcanic dike." This dike extends for some distance along the river, near its banks and nearly parallel to the course. It bears close resemblance to a roughly constructed wall. The top of this dike is very rugged and the height of carrying attitudes. In some places it is twenty feet high and several feet in thickness, and again may be easily clambered over. The rock of which this wall of nature is composed is of a very porous character, bearing some resemblance to pumicestone, though much more solid and of greater specific gravity. The entire region is of volcanic origin and evidently was once the scene of great eruptive activity. Scoria and lava abound, though the face of the country is now thickly clad with timber and brush. The dike begins and ends abruptly.

The wall of the dike is evidently the result of volcanic forces, and has not doubt existed for many centuries. It stands clear from clinging rocks, has a narrow foundation, with vertical walls, and is very straight. The mystery is what forces of nature could have piled up or left standing this rock formation so uniform. The dike has puzzled not a few geologists who have visited and examined it.

Modern Restlessness.

The great restlessness of the modern world is perplexing. Why is it that people need so much change nowadays? That they need it, and that they take it, there can be little question. Hard workers very seldom remain in the same house in London for three months in succession. They make up the days by getting away for one week out of at least. They need a good holiday in the autumn. Four weeks is coming to be regarded as a minimum. Then the holidays, Easter, Whitsuntide and the rest, are enjoyed, if possible, with a change. Clearly everyone who can afford it gets away for some little part of the winter.—British Weekly.

Nothing But Board.

Police Magistrate—The address you gave is a lumber yard.

The Hobo—Yes, yer honor. Dat's where I boards. See?—Chicago Daily News.

Had Been There.

Giffo (engaged)—I love to hear my fiances talk. I could listen to her forever.

Spinks (married)—That's fortunate. "Why so?"

"You'll have to if you marry her."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Too Subsequent.

Kitty had never seen a dachshund before.

"Ain't he a funny looking dog, mamma?" she said. "It's such a long time between his fore legs and his back legs!"—Chicago Tribune.

For Scorching Motorists.

A photographic police trap for scorching motorists is likely to be heard of in the near future, for a Wolverhampton firm has invented an instrument which, when placed in position, requires only a button to be pressed, and at once a photographic reproduction is made of any passing motor car, with the time and date. By the use of an instrument of this kind at the beginning and end of a police trap the results should prove absolutely accurate, so long as the watches used in the apparatus are synchronized and the distance is properly measured.

Uncle Sam's Auto Road.

Seven miles of a broad automobile road is to be the latest investment of Uncle Sam. The plans were found ed in the seventeenth century by a colony of Spaniards coming by way of Mexico. This colony consisted of 70 persons, headed by Don Ignacio Bacca, a Spanish grandee. The settlement prospered for many years and was the leading town of New Mexico, although it never attained a population beyond a few thousand. In the palmy days Tome was the home of the Baccas, the Castillos, the Oteros, the Chaves and other distinguished families, whose names still stand on New Mexico's roster of aristocracy.

Lion Tamer's Titled Wife.

Capt. Jack Bonavita, the lion tamer at Bostock's at Ceney Island, has a princess for a wife. She is no less a personage than Princess De Montglyon, divorced wife of Duke D'Avaray, who is a French nobleman. She is the mother of the present Marquis D'Avaray. The countess fell in love with Bonavita on seeing him in the lion's cage, though, since an encounter with a lion a year or so ago, he is shy an arm.

Japs Like Our Tuna.

"Marching through Georgia" is said to be the favorite tune of the Japanese soldiers. Native music has no marches, as it is without form. Patriotic Japanese composers have, however, since the war began remedied this defect by adapting various foreign pieces. The soldiers have picked up the new airs and sing them great delight the Japanese words fitted to them.

German Servant Girls.

A postage stamp in value about 2½d. is pasted each week in a little blank book which every servant girl who engages possesses. The stamp is the donation of her mistress, enforced by law. Should the girl get ill, the stamps are evidence that the engagement, or she may keep them until she is old, when the government pays their face value.

House of Lords Custom.

It is the table custom of the house of lords to preserve, duly "docketed," places in their cloakroom for young peers awaiting their coming of age. To show how thoughtful they are in this respect, there is a place reserved for the baby marquis of Donegal, awaiting the arrival of his twenty-first birthday.

Beer War Horse.

The only equine survivor of the battle of Colenso, a battery horse, is about to be sent from South Africa to England, where his owner will end his days in peace and comfort. He received ten wounds in the battle, but is a fine, sound horse now.

Odd Organization.

Paris possesses a curious social organization with an odd purpose. It is a band of Parisian tradesmen, who agree to trade with one another to the almost extent possible, and when necessary, to help one another with loans without interest. The clique calls itself "The Tranquil Fathers."

To Improve the Po.

The Italian government will spend $23,600,000 to improve navigation on the River Po, Italy, and its tributaries. 48,500 horsepower energy will be developed along the Po for industrial enterprises, the annual rent of which will yield the government $300,000.

When It Grew Tiresome.

"I never thought," said the conceited lecturer, "that my voice would fill that hall."

"No," replied the candid man, "I thought at one time it would empty it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Among the Politicians.

Judging from a cursory glance at the people we know, it would seem that girth and good clothes were as important factors in personal prosperity as integrity and intellect.—Puck.

Bagpipes from Norway.

It is a curious fact that bagpipes were invented in Norway and thence imported into Scotland in a period when a portion of the country fell into Scandinavian hands.

WHAT SHE WOULD TAKE.

Something That Would Enable Her to Escape Those Hasbury Jokes.

"Gimme a little cold polar bear," said the man in the basement restaurant to the waitress who, having brought him a glass of water, had stopped to get his order, relates the Chicago Tribune.

"Polar bear's all out," she replied, with a faraway gaze that went past his head without seeing him.

"Got any cold watermelon?"

"Yes. Want some?"

"No, not if you've got it. How about that pickled pig's foot?"

"It's all right. D'a want that?"

"Not at present. I'll be darned. Well, I don't see anything here on this bill that's fit to eat on a hot day. Bring me some hot pancakes and coffee. Hurry 'em along. Well, I guess I'll have to hold off for the time I get 'em."

The waitress crept away, still without seeing the customer. He called her back.

"Here," said the customer, "I was just a joke. I want a boiled dinner. Think you can take to laugh the next time I get funny?"

"Chloroform," said the waitress, as she started for the kitchen.

SISTER MARY'S WISDOM.

Gave Brother John the Key to Success in All Lines of Business.

Mary had a little lamb, its fleece was white as snow; it strayed away one summer day where lambs should never go, and Mary followed after, and came streamed slowly from her eyes; she never found the lamb because she did not advertise. And Mary had a brother John, who was a village lawyer, sat down and smoked his pipe and watched the open door. The people passed and passed and did not stop to buy, John still sat down and smoked and watched with his sleepy eye.

And so the brokers seized his stock, but still he lingered near, and Mary came to drop with her a sympathetic tear.

"How is it, sister, can you tell why other lawyers here sell all their goods so quickly and thrive from year to year?"

Remembering now her own sad luck in the little matter, she said: "Because they fatten, John, because they advertise."

Indian's Revenge.

"At last," muttered Eat Em-Alive, chief of the Ogallalas, "at last I have the face his revenge and sweep the pale face from the American continent."

He had just been reading that in Mispah the experiments of employing Indian girl cooking school graduates as cooks in private families was being successfully made.—Baltimore American.

Bait for Buyers.

"How will we get rid of that edition de luxe?" asked the manager of the publishing house. "It contains nothing that is original or surprising."

"Never mind," answered the salesman, "we'll raise the price a few dollars and advertise it as 'unexpurgated.'"—Washington Star.

On His Track.

"Pa," asked the reporter's little boy, "what is a 'nemesis?'"

"A 'nemesis,' my son," replied the senator, wearily, "is a female officeseeker who, in a moment of foolish kind-heartedness, you promised to assist."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Met Their Fault.

"Some people never know when they's well off in this world," observed the philosopher.

"No," replied the pessimist; "sometimes they never get the chance!"—Detroit Free Press.

Foreigner—Yes, a girl just told me she was "dead gone" on me, and indoor games were going out.—N. Y. Sun.

Voice from Arkansas.

Cleveland, Ark., July 31st. (Special).—Nearly every newspaper tells of some wonderful cure of some form of Kidney Disease by the Great Combination Pill—Doan's Kidney Pills, and this part of Arkansas is not without its share of evidence that the case is too deep seated for Doan's Kidney Pills to cure.

Mr. A. J. Cauffy, well known and highly respected here, tells of his own case and how he was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills. Mr. Carlile says:

"I am glad to let the public know what I think of Doan's Kidney Pills. I think they are the best remedy for said kidneys ever made.

"I had Kidney Trouble for 23 years and never found anything that did me so much good as Doan's Kidney Pills. I recommend them to all sufferers."

There is no uncertain sound about Mr. Carlile's statement. He says that Doan's Kidney Pills rescued him from a life of suffering and he wants the public to know it. Doan's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ills from Backache to Bright's Disease.

There is hardly enough flattery in the whole world to satisfy one man who believes he has a new figure that must be dressed in the perfection of fashion.—Life.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

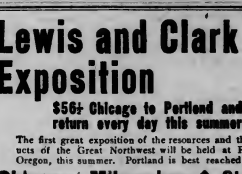
Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal, and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.



Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon the kidneys. Dr. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for kidney troubles of women, and in the only way it is especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent, painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or face, dizziness, specks before the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or restless nights, dust sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life.

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conyers, Ga.:

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I made up my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I tell every suffering woman about my case."—Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conyers, Ga.

Mrs. Pinkham gives free advice to women; address in confidence, Lynn, Mass.

The Secret of Good Coffee

Even the best housekeepers cannot make a good cup of coffee without good material. Dirty, adulterated and queerly blended coffee such as unscrupulous dealers shovel over their counters won't do. But take the pure, clean, natural flavored

LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees—

the coffee that for over a quarter of a century has been daily welcomed in millions of homes—and you will make a drink fit for a king in this way:

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

The LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee. Grind your LION COFFEE rather coarse. Use "tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if egg is to be used) and mix thoroughly, before you add the boiling water.

1st. WITH BOILING WATER. Add boiling water, and let it BOIL THREE MINUTES ONLY. Add a little cold water to settle grounds, and in three minutes to settle. Serve at once.

2d. WITH COLD WATER. Put your cold water to the pants and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.

3 DON'TS: Don't boil it too long. Don't let it stand more than ten minutes before serving. Don't use water that has been boiled before.

TWO WAYS TO SETTLE COFFEE.

1st. With Eggs. The part of the white of an egg, mixing it with the ground LION COFFEE before boiling.

2d. With Cold Water instead of eggs. After boiling add a dash of cold water, and set aside for eight or ten minutes, then serve through a strainer.

Insist on getting a package of genuine LION COFFEE, prepare it according to this recipe and you will only use LION COFFEE in future. (Sold only in 1 lb. sealed packages.)

(Save these Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

ANNOUNCEMENT.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

We are authorized to announce Chas E. Day, of Morehead, a candidate for re-election as Representative from Bath and Rowan counties, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Waller Sharp, of Sharpsburg, as a candidate for Representative from Bath and Rowan counties, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

UNCLE SAM eradicated yellow fever at Havana. He ought to do as well by his own New Orleans, where they have some hundreds of cases and numerous deaths daily.

ACHILLES HAGEN is now dragnetting the Auditor's agents who have been grafting for themselves by the drag-net method while ostensibly collecting taxes on property alleged to have been omitted from assessment.

A REVISED report of the U. S. Agricultural Department says that three important errors in making the previous report were found. The increased acreage in the Burley district, is only one per cent., and there has falling off of 15 to 19 per cent. in the dark district. That is a vast difference.

THE Government Printing Office at Washington is suspected now of luring a hot bed of grafters. Millions are spent every year for printing that is neither necessary nor economically useful. There is many a big leak hole in Uncle Sam's government that is wasting the money earned by the people's hard licks.

UNCLE WILSON, the optimistic chief agriculturist of the nation, is the victim of ill-fortune at last. For years the world to him was dyed with roseate hues and every thing if not wholly good was more good than bad. But some of his subordinates needed more money than their salary and used their opportunities for grafting until now his Department of Agriculture is in the throes of a national scandal and lots of citizens are questioning whether the whole Department is worth while, considering its cost.

The new woman: We have a sample visiting Bethel. She rigged out Saturday for a horseback ride, jumped on the bob-tail bank without anything on her head and went to Sherburne. We have always been for woman's rights, but only as here and think there should be a law passed prohibiting women from dressing so near in men's clothes and riding in such a fashion. Think the time will soon come when man and woman will reverse their dress—woman wearing the breeches and men the apron. They have already reversed the way of parting the hair and suppose men will have to adopt the side saddle.

Bath County's TELEPHONE Franchise Rights FOR SALE.

By order of the Fiscal Court duly made at the April term 1905, I will as Special Commissioner of said Court, on the 11th day of September, 1905,

proceed to sell for cash in hand to the highest and best bidder, at the Court-house door in Owingsville, Kentucky, the franchise rights to erect telephone lines over each turnpike and public road in Bath county, said franchise privileges to run for the term not exceeding twenty years. I will first sell said privileges over the following turnpike roads:—

Mayaville & Mt. Sterling turnpike road, Owingsville & Mt. Sterling turnpike road, Owingsville, B. S. & Sharpsburg turnpike road, Owingsville & Sherburne turnpike road, Owingsville & Preston turnpike road, Owingsville & Menifee (to Menifee line) turnpike road, Owingsville & Stepstone turnpike road, Owingsville & Wyoming turnpike road, Owingsville & Menifee (to Licking river) turnpike road, Owingsville & Dawson turnpike road, South Sherburne & Upper Blue Licks turnpike road, Bethel & Little Jourdon turnpike road, Union & Sharpsburg (Sanders route) turnpike road, Union & Sharpsburg (Bailiff route) turnpike road, Wyoming & East Fork turnpike road, Tunnel & Prickly Ash turnpike road, Bethel & Junction turnpike road, Maus Branch (Convict road) turnpike road, Salt Lick & Sulphur turnpike road, Moore's Ferry turnpike road, Water Dell & Licking river turnpike road, White Oak turnpike road, Preston & Peeled Oak turnpike road, Big Slate Creek turnpike road, Bald Eagle & Springfield turnpike road, Craigs turnpike road.

The Fiscal Court will be in session on the day of sale and the right to reject any and all bids for these said rights is reserved. And when said bids are made that will be accepted said sale will be immediately confirmed by the order of said Court, and all previous grants made by the Fiscal Court for franchise rights to erect telephones, &c., under Section 164 of the Constitution of Kentucky are void.

This July 26th, 1905.

JNO. A. DAUGHERTY, J. B. C. and Special Commissioner.

TO PORTLAND EXPOSITION. Visit Colorado and California on the Way Out and Back.

Greatest variety of attractions to the Pacific Coast tourist. You can spend some time in the Rocky Mountains, visit Yellowstone Park, attend the Portland Exposition, sojourn in Southern California, return over Southern Route by way of El Paso, through New Mexico. Or, you can go via Minneapolis and St. Paul and Northern route in any direction. Send for Rock Island folder and details of summer excursion rates. John Sebastian, Passenger Traffic Manager, Rock Island System, Chicago.

EXCURSIONS TO THE WEST

To the Pacific Coast—to California, Oregon, Washington—round-trip, long transit and return limits, liberal stop-over privileges.

The rate is practically on the basis of one fare for the round trip. Of course, if you wish to visit both California and Oregon or Washington, the cost is slightly more.

These reduced rates are in effect on certain dates in months of May to October, inclusive. They apply from all Eastern points via Chicago, St. Louis or Memphis gateways. The Rock Island System will take you up in either Chicago or St. Louis, or at hundreds of other Middle West points and carry you to the Coast in through Standard or Tourist Sleepers with unexcelled Dining Car service. The Rock Island also affords a choice of routes: on the "Scenic" route you can stop off in Colorado—see Salt Lake City—visit Yellowstone National Park; on the "Southern" route you can go via El Paso, thru New Mexico, then "up coast" to San Francisco and on to Portland or Seattle if desired.

In short, these Pacific Coast excursions offer an unusually good chance to see our western country in a comprehensive manner.

If you desire to go only as far as Colorado, there are excursion rates in effect to that section and return, all summer long, specially reduced. June 30 to July 4, August 12 and 13, and August 30 to September 4. Extension trips to Ogden or Salt Lake and return at low cost also.

From September 15 to October 31, 1905, one-way tourist or "colonist" tickets will be on sale to California and the Pacific Northwest—about half regular fare.

If interested, send name and address on this coupon, designating which booklet wanted and to what point you plan to go. Name probable date of start also, so we can advise definitely with respect to rates, etc.

Send Colorado California booklet and rates.
